Sports Seminars For Women

SEEN ON ABC7 — Some of it's boring to me. Like baseball. All they do is hit a ball, run around a base, not really a big deal.
 What? The Angels slipping from the top of its division - not a big deal?

Ladies, ladies, ladies: Want quality time with your man? Want to meet a man? You might need to speak their language. And that's where Paula Duffy and Incidental Contact come in.

You're going to know the basic rules of a sport. What positions the players are named and why they are in the field or why on the court. How to score? How does a game end? How does it start?

In the two hour seminar, you'll also pick up some of the lingo that announcers use, so you know how to get involved. Is he going to beat the buzzard? They're simple phrases. You don't have to know much to get started.

Intimidated coming to a sports bar by yourself? Don't be. It's easy to make a friend simply by talking to the screen. Look at the game, that's all you have to do. Other people tend to surround you when you talk about a game because that's normal in a Sports Bar. And talking the talk over a plate of nachos and a couple of cold ones can go a long way.

Talking about it is a great ice breaker. For business conversations and for talking to men who are sports fanatics that are in your life.

Do guys really like gals who like sports? Most of them think it's pretty cool!
